Location:	Alley Rear of 712 Bourbon Street, New Orleans, LA 70116
Case Number:	PBPB-2025-088142
Assigned Homicide Det.:	Det. Renee Broussard, Badge #1887
Weather/Conditions:	Clear, 74°F, humidity 82%, no precipitation — dry alley surface

I. SCENE DESCRIPTION

The crime scene is an alley running east-west behind the 700 block of Bourbon Street in the French Quarter, New Orleans. The alley is approximately 12 feet wide and 95 feet long. The north wall consists of the rear facades of four commercial establishments. The south wall is a masonry privacy barrier. The alley surface is aged asphalt with minor cracking — surface was dry at time of examination.

Access points: (1) West end — gated entrance from Bourbon Street, gate was found open and unlocked. (2) East end — connects to a secondary alley leading to Conti Street. (3) Staff door from The Rusty Anchor — a metal door located approximately 32 feet from the Bourbon Street gate, on the north wall.

II. BODY POSITION AND CONDITION

MARCUS WEBB was found face-down, oriented north-south, with head pointing north. The body was positioned approximately 28 feet east of the Bourbon Street gate and approximately 6 feet south of the north alley wall. Right arm extended, left arm partially beneath torso.

Visible injuries observed prior to autopsy removal: (1) Severe laceration at right temporal region with exposed subdermal tissue. (2) Contusions and abrasions on both cheekbones. (3) Swelling and deformity consistent with nasal fracture. (4) Lacerations and contusion at posterior skull — consistent with multiple blunt impacts. (5) Evidence of compression or stomping injury: distinct linear impressions and contusion patterns on mid and lower back, visible through torn shirt material.

III. BLOOD AND BIOLOGICAL EVIDENCE

PRIMARY BLOOD POOL: Extending from beneath victim's head, approximately 3.5 feet diameter. Consistent with fatal head wound. Blood was partially coagulated at time of discovery, consistent with death occurring 30–90 minutes prior to 2:40 AM discovery.

SECONDARY BLOOD PATTERN: Scattered droplets (medium velocity spatter) beginning approximately 8 feet west of victim's position, creating a trail indicating the victim may have been mobile or struck while upright, then moved or fell eastward.

V. NOTABLE NEGATIVE FINDINGS

NO WEAPON RECOVERED: Despite thorough search of alley, adjacent areas, nearby dumpsters, and drainage grates, no blunt instrument or weapon of any kind was recovered. The force and pattern of injuries suggest a weapon of substantial weight or repeated manual strikes and stomping. The absence of a weapon indicates it was removed from the scene.

NOT A ROBBERY: Victim's wallet contained $340.00 in cash (three $100 bills, one $40.00). Victim's iPhone 13 was present. No signs of a struggle over personal property. Conclusion: robbery was not the motive.

VI. CAMERA SYSTEM NOTATION

The alley surveillance camera (south-facing, mounted on The Rusty Anchor exterior) was examined. Bar owner Phillip Arceneaux confirmed the system records to an internal DVR. Upon initial review, a gap in alley footage was noted from approximately 1:15 AM to 1:37 AM — a period of 22 minutes. Footage resumes at 1:37 AM showing the victim already on the ground. Digital Forensics was notified to examine the DVR hardware. (See Digital Forensics Report, Document 25.)
