[BEGIN INTERVIEW TRANSCRIPT — CONDENSED]

BROUSSARD: Derek, I'm going to be straight with you. We have surveillance footage, we have witnesses, and we have physical evidence. I want to hear your side.

FONTENOT: I don't know what you think happened but I didn't do anything.

BROUSSARD: Were you at The Rusty Anchor last night?

FONTENOT: Yeah. I was there. So what. I'm there most Fridays.

BROUSSARD: Did you have an altercation with a man named Marcus Webb?

FONTENOT: It wasn't an altercation. It was a conversation that got heated. My ex was there — Brittany — and this guy was all over her. I said something to him. We exchanged words. That's it. I left.

BROUSSARD: You left alone?

FONTENOT: Yeah. I left alone. I went out the back, took the alley, went home.

BROUSSARD: What about Travis and Ryan?

FONTENOT: [pause] They left around the same time. We weren't together.

BROUSSARD: Indoor camera shows all three of you going out the back door together at 1:18 AM, three minutes after Marcus Webb went out the same door.

FONTENOT: [long pause] We all happened to leave at the same time. That doesn't mean anything.

BROUSSARD: Derek, there is blood on your left sneaker. How did that happen?

FONTENOT: Bourbon Street. You know what's on the ground on Bourbon Street? I stepped in something. I didn't know it was blood. It's dark out there.

BROUSSARD: The blood on your shoe is type A positive — the same blood type as Marcus Webb.

FONTENOT: Blood type isn't DNA. Lots of people have A positive.

BROUSSARD: We also have your DNA on Marcus Webb's shirt collar. Epithelial cells — skin cells — consistent with you grabbing him by the collar.

FONTENOT: [long silence] I want a lawyer. I'm not saying anything else.

BROUSSARD: Interview suspended at 10:42 AM. Suspect invoked right to counsel. No further questions.

[END INTERVIEW]

DETECTIVE NOTE: Fontenot's account of leaving alone is directly contradicted by indoor surveillance footage. His explanation for the blood on his shoe is implausible. He invoked counsel upon being confronted with the DNA evidence. This detective assesses his account as deliberately deceptive on multiple material points.

Suspect Acknowledgment: Miranda rights read and waived in writing prior to interview.

Invocation of Counsel: 10:42 AM — interview terminated.
